

THOSE A-MAZING POLLINATING BUMBLEBEES

Honeybees get a lot of attention, but our local native bumblebees are great pollinators, too! Because they have such sturdy bodies and long tongues, they're able to get into tightly closed flowers (and spread pollen) that other insect pollinators can't.

See if you can help this bumblebee make its way to the nectar inside this beautiful bottle gentian.

